Iowa Code § 96.5(2)a – Discharge for Misconduct

STATEMENT OF THE CASE:

The claimant filed an appeal from a decision of a representative dated July 31, 2023, (reference 02) that held claimant ineligible for unemployment insurance benefits after a separation from employment. After due notice, a hearing was held on August 22, 2023. The claimant participated personally. The employer participated through People Experience Director Charlott Hintz and Director of Customer Experience Kenny Freeman. Employer's Exhibit 1 and Claimant's Exhibit A were admitted into evidence. The administrative law judge took official notice of the administrative record.

ISSUE:

Whether the claimant was discharged for disqualifying, job-related misconduct.

FINDINGS OF FACT:

The administrative law judge, having heard the testimony and considered all of the evidence in the record, finds: Claimant last worked for the employer on June 29, 2023. The employer discharged claimant on June 29, 2023, due to violations of the employer's timekeeping policies.

Claimant was employed as a full-time solar repair technician from July 5, 2022, until her employment with Purelight Power LLC ended on June 29, 2023. As a solar repair technician, claimant was responsible for traveling to clients' homes and businesses to troubleshoot and repair solar panels.

The employer has a written employee manual that includes policies on clocking-in and out of work, maintaining accurate timesheets, and limiting employee breaks to fifteen-minutes in the morning and afternoon. Employees use a program downloaded onto their work-cellphones to clock-in and out of work. Pursuant to the employer's policy, employees may include work performed for the company away from a job site or at home as "time worked" if the employee receives prior approval from their supervisor to do so. Claimant received a copy of the employee manual and was aware of the employer's timekeeping policies.

On June 27, 2023, claimant's supervisor noticed that the time claimant reported clocking-in to work did not match the time she had actually arrived at the job site. The timekeeping program on employees' work cellphones records both the time and location of when and where employees clock in and out of work. Claimant's supervisor reviewed claimant's timekeeping records for the previous two pay periods and discovered that on multiple occasions, claimant either clocked-in at home before she drove to work and/or did not clock out from work until after she arrived home. Claimant lived approximately thirty-miles from the employer's premises, so including her commute as "time worked" resulted in claimant being paid for several hours that she did not actually work.

Claimant's supervisor reported the results of his initial investigation to the Human Resources Department. A human resources manager further investigated the matter and discovered that claimant had engaged in this pattern of behavior for several months and that it had sometimes resulted in claimant being paid overtime. After conferring with the human resources manager, claimant's supervisor called and informed claimant that her employment was being terminated effective immediately due to violations of the employer's timekeeping policy.

REASONING AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

For the reasons that follow, the administrative law judge concludes the claimant was discharged from employment due to disqualifying, job-related misconduct.

Iowa Code section 96.5(2)a provides:

An individual shall be disqualified for benefits:

2. Discharge for misconduct. If the department finds that the individual has been discharged for misconduct in connection with the individual's employment:

a. The individual shall be disqualified for benefits until the individual has worked in and has been paid wages for insured work equal to ten times the individual's weekly benefit amount, provided the individual is otherwise eligible.

Iowa Code section 96.5(2)d(14) provides:

An individual shall be disqualified for benefits, regardless of the source of the individual's wage credits:

2. Discharge for misconduct. If the department finds that the individual has been discharged for misconduct in connection with the individual's employment:

d. For the purposes of this subsection, "misconduct" means a deliberate act or omission by an employee that constitutes a material breach of the duties and obligations arising out of the employee's contract of employment. Misconduct is limited to conduct evincing such willful or wanton disregard of an employer's interest as is found in deliberate violation or disregard of standards of behavior which the employer has the right to expect of employees, or in carelessness or negligence of such degree of recurrence as to manifest equal culpability, wrongful intent or evil design, or to show an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interests or of the employee's duties and obligations to the employer. Misconduct by an individual includes but is not limited to all of the following:

(14) Intentional misrepresentation of time worked or work carried out that results in the individual receiving unearned wages or unearned benefits.

The employer has the burden of proof in establishing disqualifying job misconduct. Cosper v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 321 N.W.2d 6 (Iowa 1982).

The issue is not whether the employer made a correct decision in separating claimant, but whether the claimant is entitled to unemployment insurance benefits. Infante v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 364 N.W.2d 262 (Iowa Ct. App. 1984). Misconduct serious enough to warrant discharge is not necessarily serious enough to warrant a denial of job insurance benefits. Such misconduct must be "substantial." Newman v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 351 N.W.2d 806 (Iowa Ct. App. 1984). The law limits disqualifying misconduct to substantial and willful wrongdoing or repeated carelessness or negligence that equals willful misconduct in culpability. Lee v. Employment Appeal Bd., 616 N.W.2d 661 (Iowa 2000).

Reporting time on one's timecard when one is not working is theft from the employer. Theft from an employer is generally disqualifying misconduct. Ringland Johnson, Inc. v. Hunecke, 585 N.W.2d 269, 272 (Iowa 1998). In Ringland, the Court found a single attempted theft to be misconduct as a matter of law.

The employer has presented substantial and credible evidence that for several months prior to claimant's termination, claimant regularly commuted to and from work while still "on the clock." Claimant was not authorized to include her commute as work time and the weight of the evidence supports the conclusion that claimant performed no job duties during a significant portion of that time. As such, the administrative law judge concludes that claimant misreported her time to reflect time that she did not actually work. Claimant's decision to clock-in before commuting to work and clock-out after arriving home from work resulted in claimant being paid for time she did not actually work.

A company policy against theft is not necessary; honesty is a reasonable, commonly accepted duty owed to the employer. Claimant submitted timecards reflecting that she should be paid for time that she did not work. Claimant's theft was contrary to the best interests of her employer. Based on the evidence presented, the administrative law judge concludes that claimant was discharged for disqualifying, job-related misconduct. Benefits are denied.

DECISION:

The July 31, 2023, (reference 02) unemployment insurance decision is affirmed. Claimant was discharged for disqualifying, job-related misconduct. Unemployment insurance benefits shall be withheld until claimant has worked in and been paid wages for insured work equal to ten times claimant's weekly benefit amount, provided claimant is otherwise eligible.
