OC: 05/22/22
Claimant: Appellant (2)

Iowa Code § 96.5(2)a – Discharge for Misconduct
Iowa Code § 96.4(3) – Ability to and Availability for Work

STATEMENT OF THE CASE:

On June 17, 2022, the claimant filed an appeal from the June 14, 2022, (reference 01) unemployment insurance decision that denied benefits based on the determination that claimant was discharged for excessive, unexcused absenteeism. The parties were properly notified about the hearing. A telephone hearing was held on August 22, 2022. Claimant, Dwain K. Kowalske, participated personally. Employer, Logan Automotive, participated through Bruce Logan. Employer's Exhibit 1 was admitted. The administrative law judge took official notice of the administrative record.

ISSUES:

Was the claimant discharged for disqualifying job-related misconduct?
Is the claimant able to and available for work?

FINDINGS OF FACT:

Having reviewed all of the evidence in the record, the administrative law judge finds: Claimant began working for employer on August 19, 2020. Claimant last worked as a full-time mechanic. Claimant was separated from employment on March 30, 2022, when he was discharged.

Claimant had been coming to work late frequently at the end of his employment. However, he was experiencing some personal struggles and Logan, his supervisor, was aware of claimant's situation. Logan had, on occasion in the past, expressed that he would like claimant to make an effort to come to work at 8:00 a.m., which was when the shift started. However, Logan never issued claimant a warning, whether verbal or written, indicating that the conduct was jeopardizing his employment. Indeed, on at least one occasion in the past, Logan specifically told claimant that he was not considering ending claimant's employment because claimant was a good worker.

On March 30, 2022, claimant and Logan had a discussion via text that morning before the shift started. Claimant told Logan he expected to be in a little late. When claimant arrived to work, Logan informed him that his employment was being terminated due to the attendance issue.

Employer's Exhibit 1 is one year of claimant's timecards. Claimant's pattern of attendance appears to be very similar throughout the one year of timecards submitted.

Claimant testified that, after his discharge, he began working to become self-employed. However, he also testified that he diligently sought full-time work, which he would have accepted had he received an offer and ceased filing claims for benefits once he began running his business.

REASONING AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

For the reasons that follow, the administrative law judge concludes the claimant was discharged from employment for no disqualifying reason.

Iowa Code section 96.5(2)a provides:

An individual shall be disqualified for benefits:

2. Discharge for misconduct. If the department finds that the individual has been discharged for misconduct in connection with the individual's employment:

a. The individual shall be disqualified for benefits until the individual has worked in and has been paid wages for insured work equal to ten times the individual's weekly benefit amount, provided the individual is otherwise eligible.

Iowa Admin. Code r. 871—24.32(7) provides:

(7) Excessive unexcused absenteeism. Excessive unexcused absenteeism is an intentional disregard of the duty owed by the claimant to the employer and shall be considered misconduct except for illness or other reasonable grounds for which the employee was absent and that were properly reported to the employer.

The employer has the burden to prove the claimant was discharged for work-connected misconduct as defined by the unemployment insurance law. Cosper v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 321 N.W.2d 6 (Iowa 1982). The issue is not whether the employer made a correct decision in separating claimant, but whether the claimant is entitled to unemployment insurance benefits. Infante v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 364 N.W.2d 262 (Iowa Ct. App. 1984). What constitutes misconduct justifying termination of an employee and what misconduct warrants denial of unemployment insurance benefits are two separate decisions. Pierce v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 425 N.W.2d 679 (Iowa Ct. App. 1988).

Excessive absences are not considered misconduct unless unexcused. Absences due to properly reported illness cannot constitute work-connected misconduct since they are not volitional, even if the employer was fully within its rights to assess points or impose discipline up to or including discharge for the absence under its attendance policy. Iowa Admin. Code r. 871-24.32(7); Cosper, 321 N.W.2d at 6; Gaborit v. Emp't Appeal Bd., 734 N.W.2d 554 (Iowa Ct. App. 2007). Medical documentation is not essential to a determination that an absence due to illness should be treated as excused. Gaborit, 734 N.W.2d at 554. Excessive unexcused absenteeism is an intentional disregard of the duty owed by the claimant to the employer and shall be considered misconduct except for illness or other reasonable grounds for which the employee was absent and that were properly reported to the employer. Iowa Admin. Code

r. 871—24.32(7) (emphasis added); see Higgins v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 350 N.W.2d 187, 190, n.1 (Iowa 1984) (holding “rule [2]4.32(7)...accurately states the law”).

The requirements for a finding of misconduct based on absences are therefore twofold. First, the absences must be excessive. Sallis v. Emp't Appeal Bd., 437 N.W.2d 895 (Iowa 1989). The determination of whether unexcused absenteeism is excessive necessarily requires consideration of past acts and warnings. Higgins, 350 N.W.2d at 192. Second, the absences must be unexcused. Cosper, 321 N.W.2d at 10. The requirement of “unexcused” can be satisfied in two ways. An absence can be unexcused either because it was not for “reasonable grounds,” or because it was not “properly reported,” holding excused absences are those “with appropriate notice.” Higgins, 350 N.W.2d at 191; Cosper, 321 N.W.2d at 10.

The term “absenteeism” also encompasses conduct that is more accurately referred to as “tardiness.” An absence is an extended tardiness, and an incident of tardiness is a limited absence. Absences related to issues of personal responsibility such as transportation, lack of childcare, and oversleeping are not considered excused. Higgins, 350 N.W.2d 187.

Inasmuch as employer had not previously warned claimant about the issue leading to the separation, it has not met the burden of proof to establish that claimant acted deliberately or with recurrent negligence in violation of company policy, procedure, or prior warning. An employee is entitled to fair warning that the employer will no longer tolerate certain performance and conduct. Without fair warning, an employee has no reasonable way of knowing that there are changes that need be made in order to preserve the employment. If an employer expects an employee to conform to certain expectations or face discharge, appropriate (preferably written), detailed, and reasonable notice should be given.

The timecards submitted by the employer indicate that claimant maintained a variable schedule throughout the final year of his employment. The parties agreed that, though Logan sometimes expressed that he wanted claimant to arrive earlier, a warning was never issued about the conduct. Furthermore, claimant’s un rebutted testimony is that the employer explicitly told him that his conduct was not jeopardizing his employment. Claimant is entitled to rely on such assertions unless the employer clearly rescinds them. The employer has not demonstrated that claimant’s attendance constitutes disqualifying misconduct.

The next question is whether claimant was able to and available for work. The administrative law judge concludes the claimant was able to work and available for work for the period in question.

Iowa Code section 96.4(3) provides:

An unemployed individual shall be eligible to receive benefits with respect to any week only if the department finds that:

3. The individual is able to work, is available for work, and is earnestly and actively seeking work. This subsection is waived if the individual is deemed partially unemployed, while employed at the individual's regular job, as defined in section 96.1A, subsection 37", paragraph “b”, subparagraph (1), or temporarily unemployed as defined in section 96.1A, subsection 37, paragraph “c”. The work search requirements of this subsection and the disqualification requirement for failure to apply for, or to accept suitable work of section 96.5, subsection 3 are waived if the individual is not disqualified for benefits under section 96.5, subsection 1, paragraph “h”.

Iowa Admin. Code r. 871—24.22(2) provides:

Benefits eligibility conditions. For an individual to be eligible to receive benefits the department must find that the individual is able to work, available for work, and earnestly and actively seeking work. The individual bears the burden of establishing that the individual is able to work, available for work, and earnestly and actively seeking work.

(2) Available for work. The availability requirement is satisfied when an individual is willing, able, and ready to accept suitable work which the individual does not have good cause to refuse, that is, the individual is genuinely attached to the labor market. Since, under unemployment insurance laws, it is the availability of an individual that is required to be tested, the labor market must be described in terms of the individual. A labor market for an individual means a market for the type of service which the individual offers in the geographical area in which the individual offers the service. Market in that sense does not mean that job vacancies must exist; the purpose of unemployment insurance is to compensate for lack of job vacancies. It means only that the type of services which an individual is offering is generally performed in the geographical area in which the individual is offering the services.

For an unemployed individual to be eligible to receive benefits, she must be able to work, available for work, and actively seeking work as required by the unemployment insurance law. Iowa Code § 96.4(3). The burden is on the claimant to establish that she is able and available for work within the meaning of the statute. Iowa Code § 96.6(2); Iowa Admin. Code r. 871—24.22. In this case, though claimant testified that he was working to become self-employed, he was also seeking full-time work, which he would have accepted had he received an offer. The administrative law judge finds this testimony credible. Accordingly, benefits are allowed.

DECISION:

The June 14, 2022, (reference 01) unemployment insurance decision is REVERSED. The claimant was discharged from employment for no disqualifying reason. The claimant is able to and available for work for the period during which he was filing claims for benefits. Benefits are allowed, provided the claimant is otherwise eligible.
