Section 96.4-5-b – Benefits During Successive Academic Terms

STATEMENT OF THE CASE:

The claimant filed a timely appeal from the June 30, 2005, reference 02, decision that denied benefits. After due notice was issued, a hearing was held on July 27, 2005. The claimant did participate. The employer did participate through Pam damHorst, Benefits Administrator. Employer's Exhibit One was received. Claimant's Exhibit A was received.

FINDINGS OF FACT:

Having reviewed all of the evidence in the record, the administrative law judge finds: The administrative law judge, having considered all of the evidence in the record, finds that: The claimant was hired in January 2001, as a teaching assistant in a head start program run by the employer. The claimant is currently laid off as the head start program is discontinued during the summers between academic years. The claimant plans to return in fall when the school year begins again and the employer also plans on her return for the next school year. The employer's own literature provides that Iowa East Central T.R.A.I.N. is a private non-profit corporation established in 1966 and is the designated Community Action Agency for Scott, Clinton, Cedar and Muscatine Counties. The employer runs many programs including a winter weatherization program, a program to aid the elderly in obtaining prescription medication, a fan/air conditioner project, a food pantry, a volunteer income tax assistance project and a head start program. The head start program is only one component of the many programs run by the Community Action Program employer.

REASONING AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

The issue is whether the claimant is between successive terms with an educational institution and therefore not entitled to receive unemployment insurance benefits. For the following reasons the administrative law judge concludes the claimant is entitled to unemployment insurance benefits as the between the terms denial does not apply to this employer.

Iowa Code section 96.4-5-a provides:

An unemployed individual shall be eligible to receive benefits with respect to any week only if the department finds that:

5. Benefits based on service in employment in a nonprofit organization or government entity, defined in section 96.19, subsection 18, are payable in the same amount, on the same terms and subject to the same conditions as compensation payable on the same basis of other service subject to this chapter, except that:

a. Benefits based on service in an instructional, research, or principal administrative capacity in an educational institution including service in or provided to or on behalf of an educational institution while in the employ of an educational service agency, a government entity, or a nonprofit organization shall not be paid to an individual for any week of unemployment which begins during the period between two successive academic years or during a similar period between two regular terms, whether or not successive, or during a period of paid sabbatical leave provided for in the individual's contract, if the individual has a contract or reasonable assurance that the individual will perform services in any such capacity for any educational institution for both such academic years or both such terms.

871 IAC 24.52(7) provides:

(7) Head start programs are considered educational in nature; however, the employing unit as a whole must have as its primary function the education of students. When the employing unit is operated primarily for educational purposes then the between terms denial established by Iowa Code section 96.4(5) will apply between two successive academic years or terms and will apply for holiday and vacation periods to deny benefits to school personnel.

a. A nonprofit organization which has as its primary function civic, philanthropic or public assistance purposes does not meet the definition of an educational institution. Community action programs which have a head start school as one component are not an educational institution employer and the between terms denial does not apply.

- b. A head start program which is an integral part of a public school system conducted by a board of education establishes an employing unit whose primary function is educational; therefore, the between terms denial would apply.

The employer's reliance on the case of Simpson v IDJS, 327 N.W.2d 775 (Iowa App. 1982) is not well founded. In Simpson, the court of appeals held that any head start program was an educational institution and thus the between terms denial would apply. The Simpson decision was issued in 1982 and made no reference to any rules of the Iowa Administrative Code. Rules 871 IAC 24.52(7)(a) and (b) were promulgated in April 1988 with an effective date of May 25, 1988. The rules were written and enacted after the court of appeals decision in Simpson. It is axiomatic that when interpreting statutes or rules, it is assumed that the legislating body was aware of all case law at the time the new rule or law was enacted. A plain reading of the rule makes clear that the Court of Appeals holding with regard to head start programs was changed by the newly enacted rules of 1988. Since the enactment of the rules, head start programs which are operated by a community action program are not considered educational employers and the between terms of denial does not apply.

The pertinent part of the Iowa Administrative Code Section set out above states, "Community action programs that have a head start school as one component are not an educational institution employer and the between terms denial does not apply." The determining factor is solely whether Iowa East Central T.R.A.I.N. is a community action program with head start as one component, regardless of what percentage of revenue, employees and programs the employer dedicates to the head start program. Because the employer is clearly a community action agency, the claimant is not considered an educational institution employee and the between terms denial does not apply nor does the Simpson case mandate a denial of benefits. Consequently, the administrative law judge concludes the claimant is eligible for unemployment insurance benefits.

DECISION:

The June 30, 2005, reference 02, decision is reversed. The claimant is exempted from the between academic terms denial and benefits are allowed, provided the claimant is otherwise eligible.
