ISSUE:

Was the claimant discharged from employment for disqualifying, job-related misconduct?

FINDINGS OF FACT:

Having reviewed all of the evidence in the record, the administrative law judge finds: Claimant began working for Danlee Corporation on August 2, 2021. Claimant worked full-time hours for the employer as a third-shift cashier. His job duties included running a register, stocking the cooler, cleaning the store, “doing” the ice bags, and cleaning the parking lot. The employer ended claimant’s employment on April 8, 2022, when manager Georgia Bailey discharged him.

During claimant’s final overnight shift, someone came into the store and stole the Zippo display off the register counter. Claimant’s coworker was at the counter at the time, but she was not paying attention and did not see this happen. Claimant, meanwhile, was sweeping the parking lot when this occurred. When Bailey came to the store in the morning and learned the display had been stolen, she became frustrated, as she seemed to believe that if claimant had also been present inside the store at the time, the display would not have been stolen. Bailey responded that he could not perform all of the job duties and essentially be everywhere at once while the other cashier just stood at the register. In response, Bailey fired him.

Claimant had received verbal counseling from Bailey for various issues, but none of these were documented at the time they occurred. Claimant was never issued any written warnings or formal discipline, and he was not aware his job was in any jeopardy at the time of his discharge. He admits that he requested a transfer to a different shift, as he was concerned his coworker was stealing from the employer and no longer wanted to run a register with her. However, claimant denies ever refusing to perform any of his job duties.

REASONING AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

For the reasons that follow, the administrative law judge concludes claimant was discharged from employment for no disqualifying reason. Benefits are allowed, provided claimant is otherwise eligible.

Iowa Code § 96.5(2)a provides:

An individual shall be disqualified for benefits:

2. Discharge for misconduct. If the department finds that the individual has been discharged for misconduct in connection with the individual's employment:

a. The individual shall be disqualified for benefits until the individual has worked in and has been paid wages for insured work equal to ten times the individual's weekly benefit amount, provided the individual is otherwise eligible.

Iowa Admin. Code r. 871-24.32(1)a provides:

"Misconduct" is defined as a deliberate act or omission by a worker which constitutes a material breach of the duties and obligations arising out of such worker's contract of employment. Misconduct as the term is used in the disqualification provision as being limited to conduct evincing such willful or wanton disregard of an employer's interest as is found in deliberate violation or disregard of standards of behavior which the employer has the right to expect of employees, or in carelessness or negligence of such degree of recurrence as to manifest equal culpability, wrongful intent or evil design, or to show an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interests or of the employee's duties and obligations to the employer. On the other hand mere inefficiency, unsatisfactory conduct, failure in good performance as the result of inability or incapacity, inadvertencies or ordinary negligence in isolated instances, or good faith errors in judgment or discretion are not to be deemed misconduct within the meaning of the statute.

This definition of misconduct has been accepted by the Iowa Supreme Court as accurately reflecting the intent of the legislature. Reigelsberger v. Emp't Appeal Bd., 500 N.W.2d 64, 66 (Iowa 1993); accord Lee v. Emp't Appeal Bd., 616 N.W.2d 661, 665 (Iowa 2000). The employer has the burden of proof in establishing disqualifying job misconduct. Cosper v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 321 N.W.2d 6 (Iowa 1982).

It is the duty of the administrative law judge as the trier of fact in this case, to determine the credibility of witnesses, weigh the evidence and decide the facts in issue. Arndt v. City of LeClaire, 728 N.W.2d 389, 394-395 (Iowa 2007). The administrative law judge may believe all, part or none of any witness's testimony. State v. Holtz, 548 N.W.2d 162, 163 (Iowa App. 1996).

In assessing the credibility of witnesses, the administrative law judge should consider the evidence using his or her own observations, common sense and experience. Id. In determining the facts, and deciding what testimony to believe, the fact finder may consider the following factors: whether the testimony is reasonable and consistent with other believable evidence; whether a witness has made inconsistent statements; the witness's appearance, conduct, age, intelligence, memory and knowledge of the facts; and the witness's interest in the trial, their motive, candor, bias and prejudice. Id.

The findings of fact show how I have resolved the disputed factual issues in this case. I assessed the credibility of the witnesses who testified during the hearing, considering the applicable factors listed above, and using my own common sense and experience. I find Bailey's testimony less credible than claimant's testimony. I have concerns about Bailey's truthfulness, given her fabrication of verbal warning documents to place in claimant's employee file. Additionally, I question the purpose of a "Verbal Warning" document if the employer has, as Bailey testified, no formal disciplinary process.

Bailey claims claimant's willful refusal to perform his job on April 8 was what led her to discharge him. The ultimate question is whether I believe claimant refused to stock coolers during his final conversation with Bailey. I do not believe he did. When Bailey began blaming claimant's lack of presence in the store for the Zippo display being stolen, I am certain claimant was upset and frustrated. His testimony established that he was working with an individual in active addiction, without the capacity to perform her job duties. Claimant was left to shoulder the bulk of the work responsibilities. I believe claimant was trying to communicate this burden to Bailey when she got angry with him and discharged him.

In an at-will employment environment an employer may discharge an employee for any number of reasons or no reason at all, provided the discharge is not contrary to public policy. However, if the employer fails to meet its burden of proof to establish job related misconduct as the reason for the separation, it incurs potential liability for unemployment insurance benefits related to that separation. In this case, the employer has not established that claimant was discharged for any disqualifying reason. Benefits must be allowed.

DECISION:

The May 2, 2022 (reference 01) unemployment insurance decision is reversed. Claimant was discharged from employment for no disqualifying reason. Benefits are allowed, provided he is otherwise eligible. Any benefits claimed and withheld on this basis shall be paid.
