APPEAL 23A-UI-09378-PT-T
ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE DECISION

OC: 09/03/23
Claimant: Respondent (2)

Iowa Code § 96.5(2)a – Discharge for Misconduct
Iowa Code § 96.3(7) – Overpayment of Benefits
Iowa Admin. Code r. 871-24.10 – Employer Participation in Fact-finding Interview

STATEMENT OF THE CASE:

The employer filed an appeal from a decision of a representative dated September 29, 2023, (reference 02) that held claimant eligible for unemployment insurance benefits after a separation from employment. After due notice, a hearing was held on October 19, 2023. The claimant did not participate. The employer participated through Human Resources Manager Debra Lyon and President Steve Thornton. Employer's Exhibits A – G were admitted into evidence. The administrative law judge took official notice of the administrative record.

ISSUES:

Whether the claimant was discharged for disqualifying, job-related misconduct.
Whether the claimant has been overpaid any unemployment insurance benefits, and if so, whether the repayment of those benefits to the agency can be waived.
Whether any charges to the employer's account can be waived.

FINDINGS OF FACT:

The administrative law judge, having heard the testimony and considered all of the evidence in the record, finds: Claimant last worked for the employer on September 1, 2023. The employer discharged claimant on September 1, 2023, due to violations of the employer's timekeeping policy.

Claimant was employed as a full-time steel erector from September 8, 2022, until his employment with Schaus-Vorhies Contracting Inc. ended on September 1, 2023. As a steel erector, claimant was responsible for operating forklifts and boom lifts to erect pre-engineered metal buildings.

The employer has a written employee manual that includes policies on clocking-in and out of work and maintaining accurate timesheets. Pursuant to the policy, employees are required to clock-in and out of work by swiping a key-fob whenever they enter and exit the worksite. Additionally, if employees need to leave work for personal reasons, employees are required to notify their supervisor, receive approval, and clock-out of work before leaving. Claimant was familiar with the employer's timekeeping policy.

In early-August 2023, claimant received a written warning for using his cellphone excessively during working time. Several times that month, claimant requested to leave work early with little to no notice. In late-August 2023, the company president met with claimant to discuss the employer's expectations concerning his attendance. Specifically, the president told claimant that he was expected to request time off three-to-five days in advance of his anticipated absences and receive approval from his supervisor.

On the morning of September 1, 2023, the company president noticed that claimant was not at his assigned work location. While the president was looking for claimant, a different employee reported to the president that he had run into the claimant approximately one-hour earlier while claimant was leaving the worksite. The employee told the president that he asked claimant while he was leaving if claimant had clocked-out and claimant reported that he had clocked-out. After speaking with the employee, the president checked claimant's timesheet and saw that claimant was still clocked-in.

Twenty or thirty minutes later, claimant returned to the worksite. After claimant returned, the president asked claimant where he had gone. Claimant first told the president that he had only stepped away for two-or-three minutes to make a quick phone call. However, when pressed, claimant admitted that he had left the worksite to take care of some personal business. The president asked claimant if he had clocked-out before he left and claimant told the president that he believed he had clocked-out. Based on claimant's previous conduct, demeanor, and the fact that another employee had specifically reminded claimant to clock-out before leaving, the president determined that claimant was lying. Later that day, the president called claimant into a meeting and informed claimant that his employment was being terminated effective immediately due to violations of the employer's timekeeping policy.

Claimant's administrative records indicate that claimant filed his original claim for benefits with an effective date of September 3, 2023. Claimant has filed weekly claims for benefits for four-weeks between September 3 and October 14, 2023. Claimant has received total unemployment insurance benefits of $2,327.00. Testimony at hearing indicated that the employer participated in the fact-finding interview.

REASONING AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

For the reasons that follow, the administrative law judge concludes the claimant was discharged from employment due to disqualifying, job-related misconduct.

Iowa Code section 96.5(2)a provides:

An individual shall be disqualified for benefits:

2. Discharge for misconduct. If the department finds that the individual has been discharged for misconduct in connection with the individual's employment:

a. The individual shall be disqualified for benefits until the individual has worked in and has been paid wages for insured work equal to ten times the individual's weekly benefit amount, provided the individual is otherwise eligible.

Iowa Code section 96.5(2)d(14) provides:

An individual shall be disqualified for benefits, regardless of the source of the individual's wage credits:

2. Discharge for misconduct. If the department finds that the individual has been discharged for misconduct in connection with the individual's employment:

d. For the purposes of this subsection, "misconduct" means a deliberate act or omission by an employee that constitutes a material breach of the duties and obligations arising out of the employee's contract of employment. Misconduct is limited to conduct evincing such willful or wanton disregard of an employer's interest as is found in deliberate violation or disregard of standards of behavior which the employer has the right to expect of employees, or in carelessness or negligence of such degree of recurrence as to manifest equal culpability, wrongful intent or evil design, or to show an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interests or of the employee's duties and obligations to the employer. Misconduct by an individual includes but is not limited to all of the following:

(14) Intentional misrepresentation of time worked or work carried out that results in the individual receiving unearned wages or unearned benefits.

The employer has the burden of proof in establishing disqualifying job misconduct. Cosper v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 321 N.W.2d 6 (Iowa 1982).

The issue is not whether the employer made a correct decision in separating claimant, but whether the claimant is entitled to unemployment insurance benefits. Infante v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 364 N.W.2d 262 (Iowa Ct. App. 1984). Misconduct serious enough to warrant discharge is not necessarily serious enough to warrant a denial of job insurance benefits. Such misconduct must be "substantial." Newman v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 351 N.W.2d 806 (Iowa Ct. App. 1984). The law limits disqualifying misconduct to substantial and willful wrongdoing or repeated carelessness or negligence that equals willful misconduct in culpability. Lee v. Employment Appeal Bd., 616 N.W.2d 661 (Iowa 2000).

Reporting time on one's timecard when one is not working is theft from the employer. Theft from an employer is generally disqualifying misconduct. Ringland Johnson, Inc. v. Hunecke, 585 N.W.2d 269, 272 (Iowa 1998). In Ringland, the Court found a single attempted theft to be misconduct as a matter of law.

The employer has presented substantial and credible evidence that claimant misreported his time to reflect time that he did not actually work on September 1, 2023. Claimant's misreporting of his time resulted in claimant being paid for time he did not actually work.

A company policy against theft is not necessary; honesty is a reasonable, commonly accepted duty owed to the employer. Claimant submitted a timecard reflecting that he should be paid for time that he did not work. Claimant's theft was contrary to the best interests of the employer. Based on the evidence presented, the administrative law judge concludes that claimant was discharged for disqualifying, job-related misconduct. Benefits are denied.

The next issues to be determined are whether claimant has been overpaid benefits, whether the claimant must repay those benefits, and whether the employer's account will be charged. For the reasons that follow, the administrative law judge concludes:

7. Recovery of overpayment of benefits.

a. If an individual receives benefits for which the individual is subsequently determined to be ineligible, even though the individual acts in good faith and is not otherwise at fault, the benefits shall be recovered. The department in its discretion may recover the overpayment of benefits either by having a sum equal to the overpayment deducted from any future benefits payable to the individual or by having the individual pay to the department a sum equal to the overpayment.

b. (1)(a) If the department determines that an overpayment has been made, the charge for the overpayment against the employer's account shall be removed and the account shall be credited with an amount equal to the overpayment from the unemployment compensation trust fund and this credit shall include both contributory and reimbursable employers, notwithstanding section 96.8, subsection 5. The employer shall not be relieved of charges if benefits are paid because the employer or an agent of the employer failed to respond timely or adequately to the department's request for information relating to the payment of benefits. This prohibition against relief of charges shall apply to both contributory and reimbursable employers.

(b) However, provided the benefits were not received as the result of fraud or willful misrepresentation by the individual, benefits shall not be recovered from an individual if the employer did not participate in the initial determination to award benefits pursuant to section 96.6, subsection 2, and an overpayment occurred because of a subsequent reversal on appeal regarding the issue of the individual's separation from employment.

(2) An accounting firm, agent, unemployment insurance accounting firm, or other entity that represents an employer in unemployment claim matters and demonstrates a continuous pattern of failing to participate in the initial determinations to award benefits, as determined and defined by rule by the department, shall be denied permission by the department to represent any employers in unemployment insurance matters. This subparagraph does not apply to attorneys or counselors admitted to practice in the courts of this state pursuant to section 602.10101.

Iowa Admin. Code r. 871-24.10 provides:

Employer and employer representative participation in fact-finding interviews.

(1) "Participate," as the term is used for employers in the context of the initial determination to award benefits pursuant to Iowa Code section 96.6, subsection 2, means submitting detailed factual information of the quantity and quality that if unrebutted would be sufficient to result in a decision favorable to the employer. The most effective means to participate is to provide live testimony at the interview from a witness with firsthand knowledge of the events leading to the separation. If no live testimony is provided, the employer must provide the name and telephone number of an employee with firsthand information who may be contacted, if necessary, for rebuttal. A party may also participate by providing detailed written statements or documents that provide detailed factual information of the events leading to separation. At a minimum, the information provided by the employer or the employer's representative must identify the dates and particular circumstances of the incident or incidents, including, in the case of discharge, the act or omissions of the claimant or, in the event of a voluntary separation, the stated reason for the quit. The specific rule or policy must be submitted if the claimant was discharged for violating such rule or policy. In the case of discharge for attendance violations, the information must include the circumstances of all incidents the employer or the employer's representative contends meet the definition of unexcused absences as set forth in 871—subrule 24.32(7). On the other hand, written or oral statements or general conclusions without supporting detailed factual information and information submitted after the fact-finding decision has been issued are not considered participation within the meaning of the statute.

(2) "A continuous pattern of nonparticipation in the initial determination to award benefits," pursuant to Iowa Code section 96.6, subsection 2, as the term is used for an entity representing employers, means on 25 or more occasions in a calendar quarter beginning with the first calendar quarter of 2009, the entity files appeals after failing to participate. Appeals filed but withdrawn before the day of the contested case hearing will not be considered in determining if a continuous pattern of nonparticipation exists. The division administrator shall notify the employer's representative in writing after each such appeal.

(3) If the division administrator finds that an entity representing employers as defined in Iowa Code section 96.6, subsection 2, has engaged in a continuous pattern of nonparticipation, the division administrator shall suspend said representative for a period of up to six months on the first occasion, up to one year on the second occasion and up to ten years on the third or subsequent occasion. Suspension by the division administrator constitutes final agency action and may be appealed pursuant to Iowa Code section 17A.19.

(4) "Fraud or willful misrepresentation by the individual," as the term is used for claimants in the context of the initial determination to award benefits pursuant to Iowa Code section 96.6, subsection 2, means providing knowingly false statements or knowingly false denials of material facts for the purpose of obtaining unemployment insurance benefits. Statements or denials may be either oral or written by the claimant. Inadvertent misstatements or mistakes made in good faith are not considered fraud or willful misrepresentation.

This rule is intended to implement Iowa Code section 96.3(7)"b" as amended by 2008 Iowa Acts, Senate File 2160.

The unemployment insurance law provides that benefits must be recovered from a claimant who receives benefits and is later determined to be ineligible for benefits, even though the claimant acted in good faith and was not otherwise at fault. However, the overpayment will not be recovered when it is based on a reversal on appeal of an initial determination to award benefits on an issue regarding the claimant's employment separation if: (1) the benefits were not received due to any fraud or willful misrepresentation by the claimant and (2) the employer did not participate in the initial proceeding to award benefits. The employer will not be charged for benefits if it is determined that they did participate in the fact-finding interview. Iowa Code § 96.3(7), Iowa Admin. Code r. 871-24.10.

Because claimant's separation was disqualifying, benefits were paid to which claimant was not entitled. The administrative law judge concludes that claimant has been overpaid unemployment insurance benefits in the amount of $2,327.00 for four weeks between September 3 and October 14, 2023. There is no evidence that claimant received these benefits due to fraud or willful misrepresentation. Because the employer participated in the fact-finding interview, the claimant is obligated to repay to the agency the benefits he received and the employer's account shall not be charged.

DECISION:

The September 29, 2023, (reference 02) unemployment insurance decision is reversed. Claimant was discharged for disqualifying, job-related misconduct. Unemployment insurance benefits shall be withheld until claimant has worked in and been paid wages for insured work equal to ten times claimant's weekly benefit amount, provided claimant is otherwise eligible.

Claimant has been overpaid regular unemployment insurance benefits in the gross amount of $2,327.00 and is obligated to repay the agency those benefits. The employer did participate in the fact-finding interview and its account shall not be charged.
