APPEAL 24A-UI-10440-S2-T

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE DECISION

OC: 11/17/24
Claimant: Appellant (2)

Iowa Code § 96.5(2)a – Discharge for Misconduct

STATEMENT OF THE CASE:

On December 16, 2024, the claimant Kamerlon Harmon filed an appeal from the December 9, 2024, (reference 01) unemployment insurance decision that denied benefits based upon a finding claimant was discharged due to violation of a known company rule. The parties were properly notified of the hearing scheduled for January 6, 2025. At the start of the hearing, the claimant requested a continuance because she had not received the employer's proposed exhibits prior to the start of the hearing. The request was granted and the parties agreed to the new date and time for the hearing. After due notice was issued, a telephone hearing was held on January 16, 2025. Claimant participated. Boniesha Sawyers testified on behalf of claimant. Employer Neuro Rehabcare of Waterloo, LLC participated through program director Alexandra Hoefer and was represented by Andrea Krueger. Employer's Exhibits 1 - 5 were received.

ISSUE:

Was the claimant discharged for disqualifying job-related misconduct?

FINDINGS OF FACT:

Having reviewed all of the evidence in the record, the administrative law judge finds: Claimant was employed full time as a direct service professional and medical assistant from June 11, 2020, until November 19, 2024, when she was discharged.

On November 16, 2024, claimant sat with a client, the client's mother, and two employees, Ryan and Kaleya. Claimant commented that the house where the client lived was being run like a hotel because people who were not residents were frequently staying the night. While having guests stay overnight was not in violation of employer's policy for its clients, it frustrated claimant so she commented on it.

On November 19, 2024, employer discharged claimant for violating its confidentiality policy for discussing personal information about a client. When claimant's supervisor Briana Weliver spoke to claimant about the reason for her discharge, she stated an employee, Kaleya, had notified her that she had disclosed confidential information about another client. Claimant admitted to making the statement about the house being run like a hotel, but denied all other comments because she did not make them.

Claimant received no disciplinary action for similar conduct during her employment.

REASONING AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

The issue is whether claimant was discharged for no disqualifying reason. For the reasons that follow, the administrative law judge concludes she was. Benefits are allowed.

Iowa Code § 96.5(2)a provides:

An individual shall be disqualified for benefits:

2. Discharge for misconduct. If the department finds that the individual has been discharged for misconduct in connection with the individual's employment:

a. The individual shall be disqualified for benefits until the individual has worked in and has been paid wages for insured work equal to ten times the individual's weekly benefit amount, provided the individual is otherwise eligible.

Iowa Code section 96.5(2)b, c and d provide:

An individual shall be disqualified for benefits, regardless of the source of the individual's wage credits:

2. Discharge for misconduct. If the department finds that the individual has been discharged for misconduct in connection with the individual's employment:

b. Provided further, if gross misconduct is established, the department shall cancel the individual's wage credits earned, prior to the date of discharge, from all employers.

c. Gross misconduct is deemed to have occurred after a claimant loses employment as a result of an act constituting an indictable offense in connection with the claimant's employment, provided the claimant is duly convicted thereof or has signed a statement admitting the commission of such an act. Determinations regarding a benefit claim may be redetermined within five years from the effective date of the claim. Any benefits paid to a claimant prior to a determination that the claimant has lost employment as a result of such act shall not be considered to have been accepted by the claimant in good faith.

d. For the purposes of this subsection, "misconduct" means a deliberate act or omission by an employee that constitutes a material breach of the duties and obligations arising out of the employee's contract of employment. Misconduct is limited to conduct evincing such willful or wanton disregard of an employer's interest as is found in deliberate violation or disregard of standards of behavior which the employer has the right to expect of employees, or in carelessness or negligence of such degree of recurrence as to manifest equal culpability, wrongful intent or even design, or to show an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interests or of the employee's duties and obligations to the employer. Misconduct by an individual includes but is not limited to all of the following:

- (1) Material falsification of the individual's employment application.
- (2) Knowing violation of a reasonable and uniformly enforced rule of an employer.
- (3) Intentional damage of an employer's property.
- (4) Consumption of alcohol, illegal or nonprescribed prescription drugs, or an impairing substance in a manner not directed by the manufacturer, or a combination of such substances, on the employer's premises in violation of the employer's employment policies.
- (5) Reporting to work under the influence of alcohol, illegal or nonprescribed prescription drugs, or an impairing substance in an off-label manner, or a combination of such substances, on the employer's premises in violation of the employer's employment policies, unless the individual is compelled to work by the employer outside of scheduled or on-call working hours.
- (6) Conduct that substantially and unjustifiably endangers the personal safety of coworkers or the general public.
- (7) Incarceration for an act for which one could reasonably expect to be incarcerated that result in missing work.
- (8) Incarceration as a result of a misdemeanor or felony conviction by a court of competent jurisdiction.
- (9) Excessive unexcused tardiness or absenteeism.
- (10) Falsification of any work-related report, task, or job that could expose the employer or coworkers to legal liability or sanction for violation of health or safety laws.
- (11) Failure to maintain any licenses, registration, or certification that is reasonably required by the employer or by law, or that is a functional requirement to perform the individual's regular job duties, unless the failure is not within the control of the individual.
- (12) Conduct that is libelous or slanderous toward an employer or an employee of the employer if such conduct is not protected under state or federal law.
- (13) Theft of an employer or coworker's funds or property.
- (14) Intentional misrepresentation of time worked or work carried out that results in the individual receiving unearned wages or unearned benefits.

The employer has the burden of proof in establishing disqualifying job misconduct. Cosper v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 321 N.W.2d 6 (Iowa 1982). The issue is not whether the employer made a correct decision in separating claimant, but whether the claimant is entitled to unemployment insurance benefits. Infante v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 364 N.W.2d 262 (Iowa Ct.

App. 1984). What constitutes misconduct justifying termination of an employee and what misconduct warrants denial of unemployment insurance benefits are two separate decisions. Pierce v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 425 N.W.2d 679 (Iowa Ct. App. 1988).

In an at-will employment environment an employer may discharge an employee for any number of reasons or no reason at all if it is not contrary to public policy, but if it fails to meet its burden of proof to establish job related misconduct as the reason for the separation, it incurs potential liability for unemployment insurance benefits related to that separation. A determination as to whether an employee's act is misconduct does not rest solely on the interpretation or application of the employer's policy or rule. A violation is not necessarily disqualifying misconduct even if the employer was fully within its rights to impose discipline up to or including discharge for the incident under its policy.

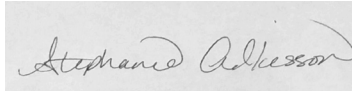

The decision in this case rests, at least in part, on the credibility of the witnesses. It is the duty of the administrative law judge as the trier of fact in this case, to determine the credibility of witnesses, weigh the evidence and decide the facts in issue. Arndt v. City of LeClaire, 728 N.W.2d 389, 394-395 (Iowa 2007). The administrative law judge may believe all, part or none of any witness's testimony. State v. Holtz, 548 N.W.2d 162, 163 (Iowa App. 1996). In assessing the credibility of witnesses, the administrative law judge should consider the evidence using his or her own observations, common sense and experience. Id. In determining the facts, and deciding what testimony to believe, the fact finder may consider the following factors: whether the testimony is reasonable and consistent with other believable evidence; whether a witness has made inconsistent statements; the witness's appearance, conduct, age, intelligence, memory and knowledge of the facts; and the witness's interest in the trial, their motive, candor, bias and prejudice. Id.

The findings of fact show how the disputed factual issues were resolved. The employer presented a witness with second-hand knowledge of the situation. No request to continue the hearing was made to allow the individuals with first hand knowledge to be present. While employer presented a handwritten statement it alleged a witness wrote, claimant presented un rebutted testimony that the employee did not write the statement and was forced to sign it in order to obtain a raise. As the claimant presented direct, first-hand testimony while the employer relied upon second-hand reports, the administrative law judge concludes that the claimant's recollection of the events is more credible than that of the employer. Claimant admitted to making one of the comments alleged in the complaint, but employer altered her words in the documents to make it look as though she admitted to making all of the alleged statements. Finally, claimant testified she herself spoke to the client's mother after her discharge who stated Ms. Weliver had called her and wanted her to admit that claimant made certain statements she had not in fact made.

An employer may discharge an employee for any number of reasons or no reason at all if it is not contrary to public policy, but if it fails to meet its burden of proof to establish job related misconduct as the reason for the separation, employer incurs potential liability for unemployment insurance benefits related to that separation. Here, there was no final act of misconduct that claimant committed that would disqualify her from receiving benefits. The administrative law judge finds the claimant's testimony credible, which is that she engaged in a conversation with a client and their mother, and she expressed her frustration with the fact that non-clients were spending the night in the house. Claimant did not divulge any confidential information with the client and their mother. As such, employer has not established a final act of misconduct. Employer did not prove that claimant was in violation of any rule or policy that established job-related misconduct that disqualifies claimant from benefits. Benefits are allowed.

DECISION:

The December 9, 2024, (reference 01) unemployment insurance decision is REVERSED. There was no disqualifying separation with this employer. The claimant is allowed benefits, provided they remain otherwise eligible.
