Iowa Code § 96.5-2-a - Discharge for Misconduct

Iowa Code § 96.3-7 - Overpayment

STATEMENT OF THE CASE:

Rembrandt Enterprises, Inc. (employer) appealed an unemployment insurance decision dated May 3, 2013, reference 01, which held that Amy Rodriguez (claimant) was eligible for unemployment insurance benefits. After hearing notices were mailed to the parties' last-known addresses of record, a telephone hearing was held on June 17, 2013. The claimant participated in the hearing. The employer participated through Sally Brecher, Oscar Gracia and Pam Winkel. Employer's Exhibits One and Two were admitted into evidence.

ISSUE:

The issue is whether the claimant was discharged for misconduct sufficient to warrant a denial of unemployment benefits.

FINDINGS OF FACT:

The administrative law judge, having heard the testimony and considered all of the evidence in the record, finds that: The claimant was employed as a full-time packager from January 24, 2013 through March 15, 2013 when she was discharged from employment for job abandonment. The claimant had received a written warning for attendance on February 20, 2013 for four absences. All but one of those absences was reported late and two of the absences were because she overslept. The claimant received a final written warning on February 28, 2013 after she again overslept. She sent her supervisor a text message around 10:00 a.m. and said she had to get her daughter off to school before reporting to work. The employer advised her that any further attendance issues, including tardiness or failure to report her absences in a timely manner, would result in her immediate termination. The claimant subsequently failed to report to work on March 14, 2013 and failed to report her absence prior to the beginning of her shift. She sent her supervisor a text message after her shift started and said she would be in late but then never showed or called again that day. The claimant was discharged when she returned to work on March 15, 2013.

The claimant filed a claim for unemployment insurance benefits effective April 14, 2013 and has received benefits after the separation from employment.

REASONING AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

The issue is whether the employer discharged the claimant for work-connected misconduct. A claimant is not qualified to receive unemployment insurance benefits if an employer has discharged the claimant for reasons constituting work-connected misconduct. Iowa Code § 96.5-2-a.

Iowa Code section 96.5-2-a provides:

An individual shall be disqualified for benefits:

2. Discharge for misconduct. If the department finds that the individual has been discharged for misconduct in connection with the individual's employment:

a. The individual shall be disqualified for benefits until the individual has worked in and has been paid wages for insured work equal to ten times the individual's weekly benefit amount, provided the individual is otherwise eligible.

871 IAC 24.32(1)a provides:

Discharge for misconduct.

(1) Definition.

a. "Misconduct" is defined as a deliberate act or omission by a worker which constitutes a material breach of the duties and obligations arising out of such worker's contract of employment. Misconduct as the term is used in the disqualification provision as being limited to conduct evincing such willful or wanton disregard of an employer's interest as is found in deliberate violation or disregard of standards of behavior which the employer has the right to expect of employees, or in carelessness or negligence of such degree of recurrence as to manifest equal culpability, wrongful intent or evil design, or to show an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interests or of the employee's duties and obligations to the employer. On the other hand mere inefficiency, unsatisfactory conduct, failure in good performance as the result of inability or incapacity, inadvertencies or ordinary negligence in isolated instances, or good faith errors in judgment or discretion are not to be deemed misconduct within the meaning of the statute.

The employer has the burden to prove the discharged employee is disqualified for benefits for misconduct. Sallis v. Employment Appeal Bd., 437 N.W.2d 895, 896 (Iowa 1989). The claimant was discharged on March 15, 2013 for excessive unexcused absenteeism. Excessive unexcused absenteeism is an intentional disregard of the duty owed by the claimant to the employer and shall be considered misconduct except for illness or other reasonable grounds for which the employee was absent and that were properly reported to the employer. 871 IAC 24.32(7).

The Iowa Supreme Court in the case of Higgins v. Iowa Department of Job Service, 350 N.W.2d 187 (Iowa 1984) held that excessive unexcused absenteeism is a form of misconduct and includes tardiness, leaving early, etc. The Court in the case of Harlan v. Iowa Department of

Job Service, 350 N.W.2d 192 (Iowa 1984) held that absences due to matters of “personal responsibility such as transportation problems and oversleeping are considered to be unexcused.”

The employer has established that the claimant was warned that further unexcused absences could result in termination of employment and the final absence was not excused. The final absence, in combination with the claimant’s history of absenteeism, is considered excessive. Benefits are denied.

Iowa Code § 96.3(7) provides that benefits must be recovered from a claimant who receives benefits and is later determined to be ineligible for benefits, even though the claimant acted in good faith and was not otherwise at fault. The overpayment recovery law was updated in 2008. See Iowa Code § 96.3(7)(b). Under the revised law, a claimant will not be required to repay an overpayment of benefits if all of the following factors are met. First, the prior award of benefits must have been made in connection with a decision regarding the claimant’s separation from a particular employment. Second, the claimant must not have engaged in fraud or willful misrepresentation to obtain the benefits or in connection with the Agency’s initial decision to award benefits. Third, the employer must not have participated at the initial fact-finding proceeding that resulted in the initial decision to award benefits. If Workforce Development determines there has been an overpayment of benefits, the employer will not be charged for the benefits, regardless of whether the claimant is required to repay the benefits.

Because the claimant has been deemed ineligible for benefits, any benefits the claimant has received could constitute an overpayment. Accordingly, the administrative law judge will remand the matter to the Claims Division for determination of whether there has been an overpayment, the amount of the overpayment, and whether the claimant will have to repay the benefits.

DECISION:

The unemployment insurance decision dated May 3, 2013, reference 01, is reversed. The claimant is not eligible to receive unemployment insurance benefits because she was discharged from work for misconduct. Benefits are withheld until she has worked in and been paid wages for insured work equal to ten times her weekly benefit amount, provided she is otherwise eligible. The matter is remanded to the Claims Section for investigation and determination of the overpayment issue.
