DECISION

OC: 05/28/23
Claimant: Appellant (2)

Iowa Code § 96.5(2)a – Discharge for Misconduct

STATEMENT OF THE CASE:

On June 20, 2023, the claimant filed an appeal from the June 15, 2023, (reference 01) unemployment insurance decision that denied benefits based upon the determination that claimant was discharged due to disqualifying misconduct. The parties were properly notified of the hearing. A telephone hearing was held on July 12, 2023. The claimant, Michelle A. Whitton, participated personally. The employer, Casey's Marketing Company, participated through Store Manager Ian Mason. No exhibits were offered or admitted.

ISSUE:

Was the claimant discharged for disqualifying job-related misconduct?

FINDINGS OF FACT:

Having reviewed all of the evidence in the record, the administrative law judge finds: Claimant was employed full time as a first assistant manager from December 1, 2017, until this employment ended on May 22, 2023, when she was discharged.

On May 22, 2023, around noon, Mason was out of the store. Claimant received a call from someone named Eric, who identified himself as the employer's helpdesk employee. Eric told claimant that, to ensure the registers were working, she needed to activate some gift cards and provide him with the numbers over the phone. He went on to provide her with specific, correct instructions regarding how to operate the cash register, which made claimant believe that Eric was an employee of the employer's helpdesk. Claimant provided Eric with four gift card numbers, each of which had a cash value of $500.00. Eric assured claimant that her drawer would "zero out" the following morning. Once claimant hung up with Eric, she realized that the call had been a scam. She promptly contacted Mason and told him what happened.

Eric is a scammer who had been calling area Casey's stores engaging in this same scam for some time. The scam was such an issue with the employer that it enhanced its policy regarding gift cards in response. Specifically, employees had long been prohibited from activating gift cards by phone. However, in March 2023, the employer instituted a zero-tolerance policy that dictated that employees who violated the policy would be subject to termination.

Claimant did not know that Eric was a scammer when he called. She believed he was employed by the employer. It was only later that she recognized the scam. She did not know that the employer's policy regarding providing gift card numbers over the phone had become stricter. The last time that claimant knew of someone falling for this scam was in December 2022, and that employee was disciplined, retained, and ultimately promoted. However, because claimant had violated the employer's policy against providing gift card numbers over the phone, and because the employer's policy had recently become zero-tolerance, Mason discharged claimant from employment on May 22, 2023. Claimant had not received any disciplinary warnings of any kind prior to her discharge. The last time claimant received training on the policy against providing gift cards over the phone was approximately a year before her discharge, and prior to the policy change.

REASONING AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

For the reasons that follow, the administrative law judge concludes that claimant was discharged from employment for no disqualifying reason.

Iowa Code section 96.5(2)(a) and (d) provide:

An individual shall be disqualified for benefits:

2. Discharge for misconduct. If the department finds that the individual has been discharged for misconduct in connection with the individual's employment:

a. The disqualification shall continue until the individual has worked in and has been paid wages for insured work equal to ten times the individual's weekly benefit amount, provided the individual is otherwise eligible.

d. For the purposes of this subsection, "misconduct" means a deliberate act or omission by an employee that constitutes a material breach of the duties and obligations arising out of the employee's contract of employment. Misconduct is limited to conduct evincing such willful or wanton disregard of an employer's interest as is found in deliberate violation or disregard of standards of behavior which the employer has the right to expect of employees, or in carelessness or negligence of such degree of recurrence as to manifest equal culpability, wrongful intent or even design, or to show an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interests or of the employee's duties and obligations to the employer. Misconduct by an individual includes but is not limited to all of the following:

(1) Material falsification of the individual's employment application.

(2) Knowing violation of a reasonable and uniformly enforced rule of an employer.

(3) Intentional damage of an employer's property.

(4) Consumption of alcohol, illegal or nonprescribed prescription drugs, or an impairing substance in a manner not directed by the manufacturer, or a combination of such substances, on the employer's premises in violation of the employer's employment policies.

(5) Reporting to work under the influence of alcohol, illegal or nonprescribed prescription drugs, or an impairing substance in an off-label manner, or a combination of such substances, on the employer's premises in violation of the employer's employment policies, unless the individual is compelled to work by the employer outside of scheduled or on-call working hours.

(6) Conduct that substantially and unjustifiably endangers the personal safety of coworkers or the general public.

(7) Incarceration for an act for which one could reasonably expect to be incarcerated that results in missing work.

(8) Incarceration as a result of a misdemeanor or felony conviction by a court of competent jurisdiction.

(9) Excessive unexcused tardiness or absenteeism.

(10) Falsification of any work-related report, task, or job that could expose the employer or coworkers to legal liability or sanction for violation of health or safety laws.

(11) Failure to maintain any license, registration, or certification that is reasonably required by the employer or by law, or that is a functional requirement to perform the individual's regular job duties, unless the failure is not within the control of the individual.

(12) Conduct that is libelous or slanderous toward an employer or an employee of the employer if such conduct is not protected under state or federal law.

(13) Theft of an employer or coworker's funds or property.

(14) Intentional misrepresentation of time worked or work carried out that results in the individual receiving unearned wages or unearned benefits.

The employer has the burden of proof in establishing disqualifying job misconduct. Cosper v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 321 N.W.2d 6 (Iowa 1982).

A determination as to whether an employee's act is misconduct does not rest solely on the interpretation or application of the employer's policy or rule. A violation is not necessarily disqualifying misconduct even if the employer was fully within its rights to impose discipline up to or including discharge for the incident under its policy. The issue is not whether the employer made a correct decision in separating claimant, but whether the claimant is entitled to unemployment insurance benefits. Infante v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 364 N.W.2d 262 (Iowa Ct. App. 1984). What constitutes misconduct justifying termination of an employee and what misconduct warrants denial of unemployment insurance benefits are two separate decisions. Pierce v. Iowa Dep't of Job Serv., 425 N.W.2d 679 (Iowa Ct. App. 1988). Misconduct serious enough to warrant discharge is not necessarily serious enough to warrant a denial of job insurance benefits. Such misconduct must be "substantial." Newman v. Iowa Dep't of Job

Serv., 351 N.W.2d 806 (Iowa Ct. App. 1984). The focus is on deliberate, intentional, or culpable acts by the employee.

A determination as to whether an employee's act is misconduct does not rest solely on the interpretation or application of the employer's policy or rule. A violation is not necessarily disqualifying misconduct even if the employer was fully within its rights to impose discipline up to or including discharge for the incident under its policy.

The conduct for which claimant was discharged was merely an isolated incident of poor judgment and inasmuch as employer had not previously warned claimant about the issue leading to the separation, it has not met the burden of proof to establish that claimant acted deliberately or with recurrent negligence in violation of company policy, procedure, or prior warning. An employee is entitled to fair warning that the employer will no longer tolerate certain performance and conduct. Without fair warning, an employee has no reasonable way of knowing that there are changes that need be made in order to preserve the employment. If an employer expects an employee to conform to certain expectations or face discharge, appropriate (preferably written), detailed, and reasonable notice should be given. Training or general notice to staff about a policy is not considered a disciplinary warning. Here, claimant credibly testified that she did not know, first, that the call was a scam, and she did not intend to violate the employer's policy. However, second, she did not know that the employer's policy had become stricter such that she would face termination should she violate the policy. Mason's testimony corroborated claimant's testimony that she had not received formal training on the gift card policy since the zero-tolerance change. Claimant believed that she was speaking with someone from the helpdesk, and when she realized she had been the victim of a scam, she promptly informed Mason. Because claimant had received no prior disciplinary warnings and did not know that she would be terminated without such a disciplinary warning for the conduct at issue, the employer has not carried its burden of establishing that claimant engaged in disqualifying misconduct. Benefits are allowed, provided claimant is otherwise eligible.

DECISION:

The June 15, 2023, (reference 01) unemployment insurance decision is REVERSED. The claimant was discharged from employment for no disqualifying reason. Benefits are allowed, provided the claimant is otherwise eligible.
