(Decision Dated & Mailed)

Section 96.5(2)a – Discharge

STATEMENT OF THE CASE:

The claimant, Joseph Stoker, filed an appeal from a decision dated July 24, 2006, reference 01. The decision disqualified him from receiving unemployment benefits. After due notice was issued a hearing was held by telephone conference call on August 14, 2006. The claimant participated on his own behalf. The employer, Pleasure Pools, did not provide a telephone number where a representative could be contacted and did not participate.

FINDINGS OF FACT:

Having heard the testimony of the witness and having examined all of the evidence in the record, the administrative law judge finds: Joseph Stoker was employed by Pleasure Pools from April until June 28, 2006. He was a full-time salesperson. On June 28, 2006, he was discharged by Owner Jim Wahl for failing to mark off on the inventory stock list all the pools he had sold. The claimant had received no prior warnings regarding this requirement and had never been instructed he was to do this.

REASONING AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

The issue is whether the claimant was discharged for misconduct sufficient to warrant a denial of his unemployment benefits.

Iowa Code section 96.5-2-a provides:

An individual shall be disqualified for benefits:

2. Discharge for misconduct. If the department finds that the individual has been discharged for misconduct in connection with the individual's employment:

a. The individual shall be disqualified for benefits until the individual has worked in and has been paid wages for insured work equal to ten times the individual's weekly benefit amount, provided the individual is otherwise eligible.

871 IAC 24.32(1)a provides:

Discharge for misconduct.

(1) Definition.

a. "Misconduct" is defined as a deliberate act or omission by a worker which constitutes a material breach of the duties and obligations arising out of such worker's contract of employment. Misconduct as the term is used in the disqualification provision as being limited to conduct evincing such willful or wanton disregard of an employer's interest as is found in deliberate violation or disregard of standards of behavior which the employer has the right to expect of employees, or in carelessness or negligence of such degree of recurrence as to manifest equal culpability, wrongful intent or evil design, or to show an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interests or of the employee's duties and obligations to the employer. On the other hand mere inefficiency, unsatisfactory conduct, failure in good performance as the result of inability or incapacity, inadvertencies or ordinary negligence in isolated instances, or good faith errors in judgment or discretion are not to be deemed misconduct within the meaning of the statute.

This definition has been accepted by the Iowa Supreme Court as accurately reflecting the intent of the legislature. Huntoon v. Iowa Department of Job Service, 275 N.W.2d 445, 448 (Iowa 1979).

The employer has the burden of proof to establish the claimant was discharged for substantial, job-related misconduct. Cosper v. IDJS, 321 N.W.2d 6 (Iowa 1982). In the present case the employer has failed to establish the claimant failed to perform his job as instructed, or that he violated a known company rule or policy, or established any substantial, job-related misconduct. As it has not met its burden of proof, disqualification may not be imposed.

DECISION:

The representative's decision of July 24, 2006, reference 01, is reversed. Joseph Stoker is qualified for benefits, provided he is otherwise eligible.
